The North Carolina Department of Public Safety, Division of Adult Correction and Juvenile Justice, Juvenile Community Programs Section submits the following report.

Introduction

The Department is entering its third year of operating new evidence-based residential and community-based contractual services. These contracts, with the exception of the male transitional home, expire during the 2014 calendar year. A detailed description of how and why these new contractual services were put into place is provided in the background section of this report. In addition, the Department was appropriated an additional $1.5 million this year to expand contractual services. These new dollars are being used to fund the male transitional home in Craven County, to establish a female transitional home and to establish alternatives to detention services for the western North Carolina region to help overcome the loss of the Buncombe Juvenile Detention Center. The male transitional home has been in operation since June 2011, while the request for proposals for the female transitional home and the western area alternatives to detention are in development. A full description of services funded through these dollars can be found in Tables 1-4. Since these contracts expire in 2014, the Department is currently reviewing all contracts to determine if any changes need to be made. Changes needed to improve service delivery, effectiveness or to achieve efficiencies shall be reflected in the new request for proposals (RFP) issued for these services in the coming year.

Background

In 2011, to create a transparent and fair process, the then Department of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention bid out the dollars that had been previously expended for providing wilderness camping experiences for at-risk youth in North Carolina. As a part of this process the Department re-examined whether wilderness camping experiences were the most effective way to utilize these funds. After reviewing the research and meeting with a statewide advisory board including juvenile justice professionals, judges, legislators and other stakeholders, the Department determined that there was a more efficient and effective way to serve high-risk adjudicated juveniles with these funds. Although wilderness experiences had been somewhat effective in changing some juvenile behaviors, the research indicates that more effective services exist for targeting and changing criminogenic behaviors, which are those behaviors that cause a juvenile to recidivate.

To meet the needs of Level II adjudicated youth, the Department issued five RFPs that included: three for short-term statewide residential care, one for regional community-based alternatives, and one for Juvenile Crime Prevention Council (JCPC)-endorsed Level II Dispositional Alternatives.

Statewide Evidence-Based Residential Alternatives

The Department issued three RFPs seeking providers to deliver short-term/staff-secure residential services as a dispositional alternative as defined in N.C.G.S. 7B-2506 for Level II adjudicated male and female youth. The providers were required to select an evidence-based model to serve youth in these programs. A listing of those programs funded through these RFPs is described in Table 1, titled Residential Contractual Services.

The Department entered into a contract with Methodist Home for Children for a male transitional home for males leaving youth development centers. The program was created to serve gang-affiliated youth who were unable to return to their home community due to public safety concerns.

Evidence and Community-Based Dispositional Alternatives

Another weakness identified in the previous wilderness experience contract was the lack of re-entry services provided to youth returning from the program to their community. To address this concern, the Department released an additional RFP seeking contractors to provide community-based effective intermediate sanctions and re-entry services. The RFP addressed the need for a dispositional alternative as defined in N.C.G.S. 7B-2506 for high-risk Level II adjudicated youth. These services are called upon to serve high-risk youth between the ages of 10 and 17, which includes: youth returning from a youth development center, youth transitioning out of some other residential placement like a wilderness camp or multi-purpose group home, youth returning home from a detention center, or as a dispositional alternative for Level II adjudicated youth. Priority was given to proposals that were evidence-based, and targeted youth who demonstrate the most need and have the greatest level of risk of criminogenic behavior. A list of programs funded through this RFP can be found in Table 2 titled Non-Residential Contractual Services.

JCPC-Endorsed Evidence-Based Level II Dispositional Alternatives

The Department determined the need for local communities to be able to address localized gaps in services for Level II adjudicated youth. To meet this goal, the Department issued an RFP proposing services that match characteristics of programs proven effective in reducing recidivism of court-supervised youth. The RFP filled a gap in the community's local Juvenile continuum. These programs are listed in table 4 titled: JCPC-Endorsed Evidence-Based Level II Dispositional Alternatives.
