PREFACE

The Legislative Research Commission, authorized by Article 6B of Chapter 120 of the General Statutes, is a general purpose study group. The Commission is cochaired by the Speaker of the House and the President Pro Tempore of the Senate and has ten additional members, five appointed from each house of the General Assembly. Among the Commission's duties is that of making or causing to be made, upon the direction of the General Assembly, "such studies of and investigation into governmental agencies and institutions and matters of public policy as will aid the General Assembly in performing its duties in the most effective manner" (G.S. 120-20.17(1)).

At the direction of the 1985 General Assembly, the Legislative Research Commission has undertaken studies of numerous subjects. These studies were grouped into broad categories and each member of the Commission was given the responsibility for one category of study. The cochairmen of the Legislative Research Commission, under the authority of G.S. 120-30.10(b) and (c), appointed committees consisting of members of the General Assembly and the public to conduct the studies. Cochairmen, one from each house of the General Assembly, were designated for each committee.

The study of Campaign and Election Procedures was authorized by Section 1(4) of Chapter 1032, Session Laws of 1985.

The Legislative Research Commission grouped this study in the State Government Operation area under the direction of Representative Chris Barker. The cochairmen of the study commission established by the Legislative Research Commission are Senator William Martin and Representative Robert Hunter. The full membership of the committee is listed in Appendix A of this report. Chapter 1032 authorizing this study and Senate Bill 1002, 1985 Session, which the committee was authorized to consider in determining the scope of the study are attached as Appendices B and C.

COMMITTEE PROCEEDINGS

The Committee on Campaign and Election Procedures held four meetings. At the first meeting on October 14, 1986, the Committee heard from Libby Lefler, a staff attorney on the legislative staff about developments in the 1990 redistricting data program of the U.S. Census Bureau, (see Appendix D) and from James Wallace, Assistant Attorney General, concerning subjects which his office and the State Board of Elections needed to have legislation on. (see Appendix E) Committee Counsel Gerry Cohen also made a presentation on several election law issues.

At the second meeting on November 5, 1986, the Committee discussed several pieces of draft legislation submitted by staff from items raised at the first meeting, and adopted a number of proposals. At the request of the co-chairmen, Committee Counsel Gerry Cohen also briefly discussed the terms of office and years of election of Governors in other states. (see Appendix F) The Committee requested some expert testimony on this matter at its next meeting.

At the third meeting on November 21, 1986, the Committee heard from Mr. Cohen and Ms. Lefler concerning the Redistricting data program, and from Professor Thad Beyle of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill (see Appendix G for Mr. Beyle's remarks) concerning changes in the election year for the Governor and other statewide officers. The Committee continued discussion on other matters and approved several more draft bills.

At the final meeting on December 3, 1986, the Committee adopted a recommendation to change the election date for the Governor and Council of State, completed action on several other recommendations, and adopted this report.

RECOMMENDATIONS

After reviewing the election process, and hearing comments from persons involved in election law, election administration, and the political process, the committee makes the following 16 recommendations, accompanied by 15 draft bills which immediately follows these written explanations.

RECOMMENDATION #1. ELECTION OF GOVERNOR AND COUNCIL OF STATE. Only nine of the 47 states with four-year terms for Governor conduct their statewide elections in the Presidential election year. Presidential elections tend to drown out the gubernatorial competition in those cases. State contests are nationalized and state issues ignored. North Carolina's increasing party competitiveness should encourage both Republicans and Democrats to fight out state issues in the broad daylight of an even-year, off presidential year election.

The best way to separate any change from the personalities involved is to not reduce the options for any potential candidates for Governor and Council of State in 1988, by providing a transitional six-year term, and providing for implementing the change starting with a six-year term at the 1992 election. This six-year term from 1992 to 1998 can be served in conjunction with a four-year term either before or after in the case of the Governor and Lieutenant Governor. Although a six-year term is novel from a national perspective, there has been substantial legislative support in the past for a six-year term, and this will provide for a sharp reduction in campaign and election expenses in contrast with a transitional two-year term.

Draft #1 provides for a draft constitutional amendment to accomplish the recommendation. Some adjustments would need to be made in the Election Campaign Fund Act, but the committee recommends that these adjustments be made in 1989 session if the amendment passes.

RECOMMENDATION #2. VOTER PURGES. With a permanent voter registration system, there is a need to keep an accurate list of voters, because if there was no means for removing voters who have moved from the jurisdiction or have died, the voter list would continually increase and be less and less useful. North Carolina law does provide that death certificates are periodically sent to counties to remove those names from the voter list, but a process of removing persons for failure to vote is the simplest way for keeping the rolls up to date, provided there are sufficient safeguards to allow persons to easily remain on the rolls if they remain resident in the county but choose not to vote.

With the growing urbanization and accompanying transient population in North Carolina, the current system results in leaving too many names of nonexistent persons on the voter list, while at the same time not making it as easy as possible to keep persons on the list who still remain in the local area. Inaccurate lists result in unnecessary expenditures for ballot printing and election records, cause candidates extra expenditures on direct mail and other voter activities, and invite election fraud.

Current North Carolina law provides that after each presidential election, voters who did not vote in the two preceding presidential elections or any election in between are purged. This means that before a presidential election, persons are still on the books even though they have not voted in "eight years less one day". In other words, after the 1988 presidential election, anyone who voted in the 1984 or 1988 presidential election, or any election in between, stays on the books, and those names remain on until after the 1992 presidential election.

Draft #2 changes the rule so that there is a second purge period. In 1988, there would be a purge under the current rules (voting in the 1984 presidential election would be enough to keep the voter on the books), but in 1990 there would be a purge after the U.S. Senatorial election, and in that purge, any voter who last voted in the 1984 Presidential election would be purged. This has the added benefit of spreading out the purge process for the counties. In order to implement the bill in the current election cycle, there will be a purge at the end of 1987 of those who last voted in the 1980 Presidential election. This purge would have occurred at the end of 1986 if the bill had already been law.

The bill makes two other changes in the process. 1985 legislation required the board to send the voter a postcard "or other communication" preaddressed to the county, which the voter could return and stay on the books even if he had not voted. The draft require the return to be a preaddressed postcard, to make it less complicated for the voter to reply.

In addition, current law provides that in automated counties, party chairman be allowed to copy a list of voters to be purged. In non-automated counties, under current law the chairman is allowed to review the names (it was contemplated that in these counties if no list was made, the chairman could inspect the envelopes before they were mailed.) Draft #2 changes the rule so that the county provides the party chairman with a list. This allows the two parties to look over the names, circulate them in the precincts, and assist voters in remaining on the ballot.

While this imposes an additional duty on the counties, the added purge the bill provides will reduce the size of the voter list, thus saving ballot preparation and other costs in administering the elections themselves, and on balance should still result in a cost reduction to the counties. It is felt that these additional safeguards will assist in achieving Justice Department approval of the bill.

RECOMMENDATION #3. CANDIDATE WITHDRAWAL. Current law provides that in single-county elections, if a candidate wants to withdraw, the county board of elections must approve the request. No such discretion is allowed the State Board of Elections in a multi-county race, and current law provides no standards for counties to use, leading to potential capriciousness. Draft #3 removes this discretion of the county. Current law flatly forbids all withdrawals within the 30 days before an election, and this is not changed.

RECOMMENDATION #4. CURBSIDE VOTING. Current North Carolina statutes limit curbside voting for the disabled to 7:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. Under federal law, this restriction is not allowed. Draft #4 allows curbside voting during the entire time the polls are open.

RECOMMENDATION #5. NOTARIZATION OF ABSENTEE BALLOTS. Current North Carolina law requires all civilian absentee ballots to be notarized except for those coming from overseas. Federal law prohibits states from requiring absentee ballots for the handicapped from being notarized and the State Board of Elections has adopted regulations to eliminate notarization in these cases. The definition of handicapped in federal law is the same as ours for sickness or disability, one of our grounds for obtaining the ballot.

The committee feels that the same ground rules should apply to all applicants for absentee ballots, and that notarization is an unnecessary requirement. Florida eliminated notarization of absentee ballots in 1981. Attached draft #5 eliminates the requirement of notarization for civilian and military ballots, and substitutes a requirement that two persons aged 18 or over witness the ballot envelope, and sign their names and addresses. This is identical to the Florida law. False statements are a felony.

RECOMMENDATION #6. COMPLIANCE WITH FEDERAL LAW. Current state law allows temporary compliance with the Federal Voting Accessibility for the Elderly and Handicapped Act until July 1, 1987. Draft #6 extends this until August 31, 1987, when other committee proposals take effect. The draft allows the state board to promulgate transfer rules for handicapped persons assigned to inaccessible polling places, but requires the State Board to provide for requests to be made in advance of election day. Current administrative regulations provides for the request to be made only on election day.

RECOMMENDATION #7. ADDRESS CHANGES. Voters can report address changes by mail, but the statute requires the mail to be returnable. Postcards mailed at the 14 cent rate are not returnable by the post office if sent to the wrong address. There seems no reason to require the voter to write a letter, and Draft #7 would allow postcards to be used.

RECOMMENDATION #8. BALLOT ORDER. It has always been the practice on the general election ballot to list candidates in alphabetical order within each political party, but there is no statute saying this. Draft #8 gives the force of law to this policy.

RECOMMENDATION #9. REQUIRED ABSENTEE BALLOT MEETINGS. State law provides for certain required meetings of the county boards of elections to pass on applications for absentee ballots. The law is complex, ambiguous, and confusing as to the procedure for changing times and dates of meetings, and the procedure for public notice of the meetings. Draft #9 rewrites this statute to be more readable and carry out a consistent policy.

RECOMMENDATION #10. SEVENTEEN YEAR OLD VOTERS. North Carolina allows a person to vote in a primary election if the person will be 18 years of age by the date of the general election, but provides a special period for these persons to register to vote. The period begins 60 days before the primary and ends with the close of the books for the primary.

Numerous questions have arisen about registration of such voters after this deadline. If a person who will be 18 on September 1 of the election year misses the special period, must the voter wait until September 1 to register? The practice between counties is inconsistent. If the same person turns 18 on October 15, when can he register if he misses the special period? Some counties allow this voter to register before the election, while some require the voter to register on election day under the exemption for persons whose qualifications mature after the close of registration books. Some counties may not even let this person vote at all, on the basis that they could have registered in March. Unfortunately, the voter may not have moved to the county until August.

Draft #10 would let voters register after the special period if they will be 18 by general election day, but they would not be eligible to vote in the interim except in primary elections. This policy will be consistent statewide, and is believed to be the practice in most counties now.

RECOMMENDATION #11. 1990 REDISTRICTING DATA PROGRAM. At a meeting of the Reapportionment Subcommittee of the National Conference of State Legislatures in Charleston, S.C. held on November 7, 1986, census bureau officials briefed state legislative staff on timetables and criteria for further implementation of the 1990 redistricting data program.

The Census Bureau will officially invite participation in Phase II of the program in June of 1987, and the State must respond by October of 1987. The state may choose to have the entire State participate, or act on a county-by-county basis. The 1985 implementing legislation calls for counties with a population of 55,000 or over to participate in Phase II, which are the 37 largest counties.

Maps will be mailed out by the Census Bureau to the State between September 1 and December 31, 1988, with the maps due back seven months from receipt. Block boundaries on the maps will be those established through the block boundary suggestion program (participated in by 35 of the 37 counties) and those added by the Census Bureau, and township and municipal boundaries will be those reported on the 1988 boundary and annexation survey conducted by the Census Bureau. In that program, counties and cities will be asked to draw township and municipal boundaries in effect on January 1, 1988. Those surveys are submitted by January 31, 1988.

The problem lies in changes in township and municipal boundaries between the 1988 and 1990 boundary and annexation surveys. If a precinct boundary follows a township or municipal boundary on the 1988 survey, which is not a visible feature, and the township or municipal boundary changes on the 1990 survey, we have a problem, because the precinct boundary will then be unacceptable.

Additionally, the Census Bureau has informally asked for a freeze on township boundaries because of the difficulty of keeping up with changes in those boundaries. Townships are no longer used as governmental units in North Carolina.

The State has two alternatives:

1) Freeze township and/or municipal boundaries from January 1, 1988 until January 2, 1990. The 1988 and 1990 surveys would then show the same boundaries, and the April 1, 1991 computer tapes from the Census Bureau would be immediately usable.

2) If there is no freeze, and if a township or municipal boundary which is also a precinct boundary and which is not a visible feature changes, census will contact the State in early 1990, and ask the State to move the precinct boundary or combine precincts for data reporting purposes. The former is time consuming, and will delay the usability of the 1991 computer tape for some undetermined period of time, as well as requiring last minute changes in the precinct boundaries. The latter will result in less building blocks for districting purposes.

A freeze on township boundaries will have minimal effect on county operations. The North Carolina Association of County Commissioners has no objection to freezing township boundaries, and has voted its support for legislation to insure that the census bureau continues to use townships as data units.

A freeze on municipal boundaries would have a negative impact on municipalities by requiring boundaries to remain unchanged for a reason not related to the local government itself. On the other hand, since township boundaries are acceptable for precinct boundaries, a freeze on township boundaries will eliminate the need for a freeze on municipal boundaries in areas where the township and municipality are one and the same. These cities where a township freeze would eliminate the need for a municipal freeze are Charlotte, Winston-Salem, Greensboro, Fayetteville, and Wilmington.

The committee believes that a balance can be struck which will advance the State's interest in having data tabulated by precinct in the 37 counties, usable as soon as possible after April 15, 1991, without unduly restricting municipal annexations. Recommendations are as follows:

1) Township boundaries in existence on January 1, 1988 are frozen until January 2, 1990. This restriction applies statewide.

2) In all counties with a population of 55,000 or over, annexation ordinances may not become effective after December 31, 1987 until January 2, 1990 if the annexation changes a municipal boundary which is a precinct boundary, unless the boundary being changed is either a township boundary or a visible feature used or expected to be used as a block boundary for the 1990 census.

3) To minimize the effect of recommendation #2, in those areas, annexation under Parts 1, 2, and 3 of the annexation law will be considered contiguous to a municipal boundary line which is immovable under recommendation #2 as long as the area to be annexed is more than 100 feet but less than 300 feet away from the boundary. This will leave satellite annexations around those cities, but the recommended legislation will allow the intervening areas to be annexed in 1990 or after under normal annexation procedures, but with a statutory finding that the area is developed for urban purposes, thus qualifying the area for annexation.

In addition, one more modification is required in the current law. All of the area within a legislative district must be contiguous. Some current election precincts have areas not contiguous. This makes the precinct useless as a building block unless it is combined with another precinct. The committee recommends that in counties with a population of 55,000 or over, all precincts must consist solely of contiguous territory.

It is felt that the above recommendations will balance competing interests. It will slightly complicate the municipal annexation process for two years in counties with a population of more than 55,000, except that it will not effect Charlotte, Winston-Salem, Greensboro, Fayetteville or Wilmington because the December 31, 1987 municipal/township boundary will remain a township boundary. Draft #11 implements these recommendations.

Additionally, county officials have in the past certified to census officials township boundaries which are different than the township boundaries used by county boards of elections. Therefore, the committee recommends that counties in responding to the 1987 through 1990 boundary and annexation surveys consult with the county board of elections and other appropriate officials before responding to the survey. Legislation is only recommended in this area if voluntary coordination does not work. This can be followed up during the 1987 session.

RECOMMENDATION #12. CRIMINAL PENALTIES. The election laws contain numerous criminal penalty section, many of which have differing penalties. The committee recommends that in all cases where the crimes are felonies, that they be standardized at Class I, and that all misdemeanors be standardized at a maximum six months in jail and/or $1000 fine. (Currently, absentee voting felonies are Class J and all other election law felonies are Class H). Draft #12 implements this recommendation.

RECOMMENDATION #13. COMPLIANCE WITH THE HENDON DECISION. North Carolina statutory law provides that if a voter marks a straight ticket and votes for an individual candidate of another party, the straight-ticket prevails. A federal court suit compels the opposite result, and Draft #13 would amend the statutes to follow the court order.

RECOMMENDATION #14. COUNTING OF WRITE-IN VOTES. North Carolina law provides that for a write-in vote to be counted, the voter must "...write-in the name of the person..." (G.S. 163-151(6)a). This is in contrast with the method of voting for candidate printed on the ballot, where the voter makes a "mark in the appropriate voting square or circle." (G.S. 163-151(1)). On computer counted ballots, however, machines in some areas are programmed to count write-in votes only if the voter marks or punches the write-in box.

While this method is certainly easier for a computer system, because it automatically segregates these ballots for hand counting without discarding all ballots having stray marks or fingerprints, it conflicts with the statutory requirement. Not only are votes not being counted for the write-in candidate, but votes are automatically being counted for straight-tickets for that office.

As a compromise for future elections, the committee recommends that for electronically counted ballots, the voter be allowed to merely write-in the name, but somewhere on each ballot will be a box to be marked or punched to indicate to the computer that there is a write-in somewhere on the ballot. The write-in will only be counted if this box is marked. Draft #14 implements this recommendation.

RECOMMENDATION #15. ELECTION RECOUNTS. Current statutes and case law concerning recounts of election results cause needless administrative procedures. The committee recommends that the General Assembly allow recounts at the request of the runner-up where the margin is less than one percent. The text of House Bill 819, 1985 session would accomplish this end. The text of House Bill 819 is attached as Appendix H.

RECOMMENDATION #16. POLLING PLACE CHANGES. Current law requires county boards to post notices at the courthouse run legal notices, and notify the party chairman when a polling place is changed. No actual notice to the voter is required, nor is there even a requirement that a notice be placed at the old polling place. While the committee recommends no legislation, it suggests that this matter be further studied.

Note: In draft legislation, some of the bills are written in a style to show where provisions of existing law ~~are~~ are and new material inserted.

MEMORANDUM

TO: Members of the Committee on Campaign and Election Procedures

FROM: Libby Lefler, Staff Attorney

RE: Block Boundary Suggestion Program

I. Description of Program

The purpose of the Block Boundary Suggestion Program is to obtain census data in 1990 by precincts. This will aid in redistricting and also allow the counties to have the information for local elections.

In order to obtain census data by precincts, North Carolina must show the Census Bureau where the precinct boundaries are. Thus, current maps showing precinct boundaries are needed. The primary restriction imposed by the Census Bureau is that precinct boundaries must be coterminous with a major physical feature, a current township boundary, or a current municipal boundary.

There are three stages to this program. During the first stage, the State had to request the Census Bureau to place on the census feature change maps the physical features that either serve as precinct boundaries or are located near precinct boundaries. In order to do this, the counties drew their precinct boundaries on census maps supplied by the Legislative Services Office. If the precinct boundary was not a physical feature, then the county identified nearby physical features that might later serve as a precinct boundary. No precinct boundary changes were required at this stage. The purpose was merely to identify current precinct boundaries and locate nearby physical features that might later serve as precinct boundaries. If there was a dispute as to where a precinct boundary was located, then both lines were identified.

October 13, 1986

The second stage of the program occurs in late 1988 or early 1989. At that point the Census Bureau will send the State the updated feature change maps with physical features. The counties will draw precinct boundaries on the map. If there was a dispute in 1985 as to the location of a precinct boundary, the county must decide in 1988 where the boundary is.

In 1988 all precinct boundaries drawn on the map must be coterminous with a physical feature on the census map, a current township boundary, or a current municipal boundary. If a precinct boundary is not coterminous with one of these physical features, township boundaries, or municipal boundaries, it will need to be adjusted so that it is coterminous. The county will decide where the boundary should be moved. Any changes in precinct lines would not have to be effective until January 1, 1992. Hopefully, only minor changes will need to be made since nearby physical features will be on the map.

The final stage of this program occurs in 1991 when the State receives its census data back by precincts. Again, this information will be available to counties for their local elections. Also, redistricting should be a much easier task. If a county has to be divided into more than one legislative district, it is hoped that a precinct would not have to be divided into more than one legislative district since precinct data will be available.

II. Phase One

In 1985 the General Assembly enacted legislation that authorized North Carolina to participate in the Block Boundary Suggestion Program. A copy of the legislation is attached. The legislation applied to any county with a population of 55,000 or greater.

In August 1985 the counties were sent a letter describing the program. Each county was asked to respond in writing as to whether they would participate in the program. Thirty-five counties agreed to participate in Phase One of the Program. A list of the counties is attached. The only two counties with a population of 55,000 or greater that did not participate are Wayne and Halifax.

The Legislative Services Commission contracted with Land Resources Information Services (LRIS) to provide technical assistance.

October 13, 1986

During Phase One the counties were given the census maps for their county and asked to draw the current precinct lines. The counties also were asked to identify all precinct lines that followed a physical feature as defined by the Census Bureau. If the precinct line did not follow a physical feature, the counties were asked to identify nearby physical features. No changes to precinct lines were required.

Eleven training sessions were held throughout the state to assist the counties. At these sessions we explained the type of maps that were being used and reviewed the directions. Each set of directions was specific for that county. Further, if a county requested special assistance during the Program, a trip was made to the county.

After the maps were returned, we reviewed the maps and met with the Census Bureau to request that the physical features be held on the Census maps.

III. Phase Two

In late 1988 or early 1989 the Census Bureau will mail the State updated maps. The State, with the aid of the counties, will draw precinct lines on the maps. The Census will supply census data for these precincts. Thus, the precinct lines supplied by the counties in 1988 are the precinct lines that will be used in redistricting in 1991. The Census Bureau will not be able to incorporate any changes to precinct lines made after the maps are returned to the Census Bureau in 1989.

There is a meeting of the NCSL Reapportionment Subcommittee in Charleston, South Carolina on November 7, 1986. The Census Bureau will have information at this meeting concerning the scheduling and guidelines for Phase Two.

ARTICLE 12A.

*Precinct Boundaries.§ 163-132.1. Voluntary participation in Block Boundary Suggestion Program.

Not later than December 1, 1985, the Legislative Services Office shall poll the county boards of elections to determine which of their precincts have boundaries that are not coterminous with a major physical feature, as identified under the criteria to be established pursuant to 13 U.S.C. § 141(c), a current township boundary, or a current municipal boundary. The Legislative Services Office shall:

- (1) Assist county boards of elections in identifying the precincts with those nonconforming boundaries;
- (2) Place those boundaries on maps deemed appropriate by the State Board;
- (3) Request the U.S. Census Bureau to hold for census block identification in the 1990 U.S. Census all major physical features on the map near the nonconforming precinct boundary; and
- (4) Request the U.S. Census Bureau to hold for census block identification in the 1990 U.S. Census all other major physical features already on U.S. Census Bureau maps. (1985, c. 757, s. 205(a).)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1985, c. 757, s. 205(f) makes this Article effective upon ratification. The act was ratified July 15, 1985.

§ 163-132.2. Establishment of precinct boundaries for 1990 Census.

(a) The Legislative Services Office as soon as it receives the U.S. Census Bureau's official census block maps to be used in the 1990 U.S. Census shall send the relevant copies of those maps to county boards of elections. After receiving copies of those maps, the county boards of election shall:

- (1) Alter, where necessary, precinct boundaries to be coterminous with township boundaries, municipal boundaries, census block boundaries, or a combination of those boundaries provided that if, as a result of the alteration, the polling place is no longer in the precinct, it may continue to be the polling place as long as the lot or tract on which the polling place is situated adjoins the precinct;
- (2) Mark all precinct boundaries on the maps sent by the Legislative Services Office; and
- (3) File, within 60 days of the date the maps are sent by the Legislative Services Office or at an earlier time deemed necessary by the State Board of Elections, with the State Board and the Legislative Services Office the maps identifying the precinct boundaries and a written description of those boundaries deemed sufficient by the State Board to identify the precincts.

(b) The State Board of Elections and the Legislative Services Office shall examine the returned maps and their written descriptions. After its examination of the maps and their written descriptions, the Legislative Services Office shall submit to the State Board of Elections its opinion as to whether all precinct boundaries are coterminous with current township boundaries, current municipal boundaries, census block boundaries, or a combination of those boundaries, with notations as to where those boundaries do not comply with these standards. If the State Board determines that all precinct boundaries are coterminous with current township boundaries, current municipal boundaries, census block boundaries, or a combination of those boundaries, the State Board shall approve the maps and written descriptions as filed and these precincts shall be the official precincts.

(c) If the State Board does not find that the filed precinct boundaries are coterminous with the current township boundaries, current municipal boundaries, census block boundaries, or a combination of those boundaries, the State Board shall not approve those precinct boundaries but shall alter the precinct boundaries to be coterminous with the census block boundaries, municipal boundaries or township boundaries nearest to those existing precinct boundaries and these altered precincts with their written descriptions prepared by the State Board shall then be the official precincts.

(d) The changes in precinct boundaries under subsections (b) and (c) of this section shall be made effective not later than January 1, 1992.

(e) After the State Board approves or alters the precincts filed by the county boards and before January 1, 1990, no county board of elections may establish, alter, discontinue, or create any precinct except for changes resulting from amending township or municipal boundaries or by division of one precinct into two or more precincts. These changes shall be reported by the county board of elections to the State Board by filing the relevant amended Census maps and written descriptions of the precincts with the State Board and shall not be effective until approved by the State Board. The State Board shall certify these precinct changes to the U.S. Census Bureau.

(f) The State Board of Elections shall request that the U.S. Census Bureau provide summaries of census data by precinct. (1985, c. 757, s. 205(a).)

§ 163-132.3. Alterations to precinct boundaries after January 1, 1990.

For any alteration made to precinct boundaries after January 1, 1990, the county boards of elections shall establish the new boundaries to be coterminous with those of townships, municipalities, the census blocks established under the latest U.S. Census, or a combination of these boundaries. The county boards of elections shall report precinct boundary changes by filing with the State Board on certified official census maps the new boundaries of these precincts and their written descriptions deemed sufficient by the State Board to identify these precincts. No newly created or altered precinct boundary occurring after January 1, 1990 is effective until approved by the State Board as being coterminous with the boundaries of townships, municipalities, census blocks established by the latest U.S. Census, or a combination of those boundaries. (1985, c. 757, s. 205(a).)

§ 163-132.4. Rules.

The State Board of Elections may promulgate rules concerning its duties and those of the county boards of elections under this Article other than under G.S. 163-132.1. The Legislative Services Commission may promulgate rules concerning G.S. 163-132.1. (1985, c. 757, s. 205(a).)

§ 163-132.5. Cooperation of State and local agencies.

The State Budget Office, the Department of Transportation and county and municipal planning departments shall cooperate and assist the Legislative Services Office, the State Board of Elections and the county boards of elections in the implementation of this Article. (1985, c. 757, s. 205(a).)

§ 163-132.6. Applicability of Article.

This Article applies only to counties with a population of 55,000 or over, according to the 1980 decennial federal census. (1985, c. 757, s. 205(a).)

DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE

Bureau of the Census

1990 Census Pub. L. 94-171 Program

Under the requirements of Pub. L. 94-171 (13 U.S.C. 141), the Director of the Bureau of the Census is issuing below a statement of the Census Bureau's plans for providing population counts for state legislative reapportionment/redistricting needs. The Census Bureau has provided this statement to the Governor, Secretary of State, and legislative leaders of each state. Copies are available on request from the Director, Bureau of the Census, Washington, DC 20233.

Under the provisions of Pub. L. 94-171, the Census Bureau must provide each state with 1990 census population counts for legislative reapportionment/redistricting. In addition to counts by standard geographic areas (counties, minor civil or census county divisions, incorporated places, census tracts, and census blocks nationwide), the Census Bureau will provide population counts by voting district in participating states by aggregating data for census blocks within those voting districts that meet the criteria issued by the Census Bureau for the 1990 Census Pub. L. 94-171 Program.

The 1990 Census Pub. L. 94-171 Program has three major phases:

Phase 1

The Census Bureau announced this phase, the Block Boundary Suggestion Project, in the April 25, 1985 Federal Register and provided the guidelines and criteria to the Governor, Secretary of State, and legislative leaders of each state. The Census Bureau also offered to meet with officials in each state to discuss this program and answer questions: 40 states participated in such meetings.

The Block Boundary Suggestion Project afforded states the opportunity to suggest certain visible features they wanted the Census Bureau to use as block boundaries in the 1990 census to the extent those features conformed to the criteria issued by the Census Bureau. For any visible feature the state suggests that is not on the Census Bureau's maps, the state staff must provide topographic maps, aerial photographs, or other suitable materials for verification purposes.

July 31, 1985 was the deadline for the state to inform the Census Bureau of its intent to participate in this Project. Forty-two states elected to participate. A list of contact persons in the participating states is available from the Director, Bureau of the Census, Washington, DC 20233.

Phase 2

Beginning in late 1988, the Census Bureau will provide requesting states with copies of preliminary 1990 census maps showing block boundaries. State staff will delineate voting district boundaries using these blocks and the January 1, 1988 boundaries of counties, minor civil divisions, and incorporated places shown on these maps. The Census Bureau will include these voting district boundaries—updated for January 1, 1990 boundaries of counties, minor civil divisions, and incorporated places—in its census geographic system so that it can provide the state with counts for voting districts, voting district equivalents, standard census tabulation areas, and census blocks statewide no later than April 1, 1991.

Those states that are not participating in Phase 1 of the 1990 Census Pub. L. 94-171 Program may participate in Phase 2 by submitting their voting district boundaries on copies of these 1990 census block-numbered maps so long as they follow the boundaries of the census blocks.

Phase 3

The Census Bureau will deliver a copy of the final 1990 census block numbered maps and the 1990 Pub. L. 94-171 data to the Governor and the officers or public bodies having initial responsibility for legislative apportionment or districting in each state by April 1, 1991. States that did not participate in the earlier phases of this program will receive population counts and maps for standard census areas: i.e., counties, incorporated places, minor civil divisions, census tracts, block numbering areas, and census blocks. The planned subject content of these data is total population, major race groups, and Spanish origin. The Census Bureau is considering the feasibility of including voting age population counts.

Participation by a state in the Pub. L. 94-171 Program is voluntary, and questions concerning this Program should be addressed to the Director, Bureau of the Census, Washington, DC 20233.

Dated: March 11, 1986.

John G. Kenne,

Director, Bureau of the Census.

APPENDIX F

ELECTION OF GOVERNORS

The procedure for election of the Governor of the State is found in the Constitution of each State. Of the 50 states, 34 states elect their Governor for a four year term in the non-Presidential even-numbered year. Four other states elect their Governors for four year terms in odd-numbered years. (this is the system rejected by North Carolina voters in a 1986 referendum.)

Three states elect their Governors for two year terms in even numbered years. The remaining nine states elect their Governors for four year terms in the Presidential election year. Those states are Delaware, Indiana, Missouri, Montana, North Carolina, North Dakota, Utah, Washington, and West Virginia.

If North Carolina were to change to electing the Governor in the non-Presidential even year election for a four year term, a constitutional amendment would be required. Two transition provisions would have to be dealt with: (1) should the transition term be two years or six years; and (2) if a two year term, should the succession amendment be applied by ignoring the two year term (allowing the Governor elected in 1984 to be elected in 1988 and 1990, as well as allowing the Governor elected in 1988, if different, to be elected again in 1990 and 1994.)

The table on the reverse (source, Book of the States, 1986-87) shows the system in each of the 50 states.

CHANGING THE GROUND RULES FOR STATE ELECTIONS

Thad L. Beyle and Luther B. Faggart
Department of Political Science
University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill

The proposal for choosing governors (and other statewide elected officials)<sup>1</sup> in off-year elections has earned attention in North Carolina due to a constitutional amendment on the ballot in May 1986. Although the General Assembly's idea of off-presidential year statewide elections in odd years was defeated by the voters, the debate over off-year elections continues, this time including the alternative of holding statewide elections in the even, non-presidential election years.

This short statement looks at the historical setting for the number of states electing governors during presidential election years and will explore briefly three options for those remaining states who elected a governor to a four-year term in 1984. We should note that this particular proposal is part of a three piece reform package suggested for the governorship: a four year term; succession; and off-presidential year elections. These are highly interrelated as will be evident in our argument.

The Importance of Term Length

In 1945, twenty-two states elected governors for two-year terms, twenty-five for a four-year term, and one for a three-year term (New Jersey). Of those twenty-five with a four-year term, ten states (Delaware, Florida, Illinois, Indiana, Missouri, Montana, North Carolina, Utah, Washington, and West Virginia) elected their governors during the presidential election year. Thus up to thirty-two states held their statewide elections in conjunction with a presidential election. [North Carolina moved to a four year term under the 1868 constitution.]

The constitutional reform movement changing gubernatorial terms to four-years was almost completely successful over the next forty years with only three states remaining in 1986 whose governor serves the shorter term (New Hampshire, Vermont, and Rhode Island). New Hampshire voters rejected a proposed amendment for a switch to a four year term in 1986. Arkansas is the most recent convert beginning its four year terms with the 1986 elections. New Jersey switched to a full four year term around 1950. Thus, as of 1988 only twelve states will be selecting their governor while the nation selects a president.

Of the nineteen states switching to a four-year term, only North Dakota chose to hold its gubernatorial election during the presidential election year. In 1982, the voters of North Dakota rejected a proposed constitutional amendment which would have moved their gubernatorial elections to the off-year in 1990.<sup>1</sup>

The ranks of the presidential election year states was thinned further by the defection of Florida and Illinois to off-year elections. In 1964 Florida Governor Hayden Burns (D) was elected to an abbreviated two-year term which reverted to the regular four years after the 1966 election (this sans an unlucky Burns who lost in his attempt for re-election). James Thompson (R) was first elected Governor of Illinois in 1976 to the special two-year term which then placed Illinois into the non-presidential year column. In 1978, Thompson was reelected to a restored four-year term and continues to be re-elected (1982 and 1986).

There are no examples of a transition from presidential to non-presidential election years in the states which involve a temporarily expanded six-year term for the governor. Evidently a six-year extended term for statewide elected officials is not appealing. The accountability of elected executives is too important to allow anyone, regardless of party, to serve the extra two years. And extra elections can never hurt in a democracy.

In 1986, thirty-six states held gubernatorial elections, including the three that continue to choose their chief executive in every even year for two year terms. Five states now hold their gubernatorial elections in odd-numbered years, New Jersey and Virginia doing so in 1985 and Kentucky, Louisiana and Mississippi to do so in 1987.<sup>2</sup>

It is important to note that of fifty states, only nine elect their governor to a four-year term during a presidential election year; and that twenty-three other states could have easily joined them had they so desired -- the nineteen states which formerly had two-year terms, Illinois and Florida, and Hawaii and Alaska when they were admitted to statehood in 1958.

OPTIONS TO CONSIDER

For those remaining nine states there are three options to consider: do nothing; change to an non-presidential (even) off-year election; or change to an odd-year election.

The First Option. "If It Ain't Broke, Don't Fix It." To do nothing is a most viable option: obviously nothing changes, and politics continues to operate under the same political ground rules. This is such a viable option that it probably will be the choice most of the nine states will make, as there is really no choice involved: things just stay as they are.

For those states concerned with enhancing voter turn-out this timing of the elections makes sense. Voter turn-out is higher when the choice for president is at the top of the ticket. However, those concerned with the political effects of a successful or unsuccessful presidential campaign within a state or with the presidential candidate's positive or negative "coattails" should take a second look. Presidential coattails are very short at the gubernatorial level and North Carolinians should not overemphasize their importance.

After studying state elections between 1928-1952, the late political scientist Coleman Ransone of the University of Alabama stated, Taking the evidence on all of these groups over the period 1928-1952, it would seem that the coattails theory has some application in years in which there is a change in the presidency from one major party to the other. In the interval between such changes the presidential race does not seem to be a decisive factor in gubernatorial politics in most states.

Of the three groups of states suggested in this study, the group which seems to be most affected by the pull of presidential elections is the two-party group. The presidential race has apparently no effect on the governorship in the one-party states and only a fleeting effect on the normally Republican group. In the two-party states the effects of the Roosevelt sweep in 1932 apparently lasted for two elections, since 1936 was a high point in the correlation between the two races.

From 1940 to 1952, however, the correlation was negative, while in 1952 the shift to the Republicans in both presidential and gubernatorial races gives some support to the coattails theory. It would seem, therefore, that even in these states the hypothesis should be applied with caution. Taking the states as a whole, the writer does not feel that the pull of the presidential election is generally a decisive factor in gubernatorial politics.<sup>3</sup>

To update his argument, the Reagan years can be included. During the Republican watershed year of 1980 -- Reagan's coast-to-coast win and the U.S. Senate takeover -- gains in the statehouses were less dramatic. Of the thirteen gubernatorial races, the Republicans won seven, the Democrats took six.<sup>4</sup> The Republicans won two of the three open seats, defeated three Democratic incumbents, and two Republican incumbents successfully won reelection. In addition to winning one of the three open seats, five incumbent Democrats won reelection.

In the 1984 Reagan landslide, Republicans won eight of the thirteen seats up, claiming six of the seven open seats. However, in the six races in which incumbents sought reelection, the two Democrats won, while only two of the four Republicans were able hold on to their seats.

The numbers are not overwhelming in view of Reagan's 1980 and 1984 elections. In fact, the Republicans greatest gubernatorial successes came in 1986 with a net gain of eight seats, reaching virtual parity with the Democrats (24 to 26 seats) and winning important Sun Belt beachheads in Florida, South Carolina and Texas -- all in an off-year election when President Reagan was assigned to the status of "lame duck" by most politicians and political observers, and in which the President's forays into the states were on behalf of candidates for the U.S. Senate.

The point of this argument is to prevent assigning all of one party's triumphs and another's failures to the elusive theory of presidential coattails. Given these doubts neither party should pin its hopes on the influence of the head of its ticket. And party fortunes change: one year's salvation (a popular president) may be the next gubernatorial campaign's albatross.

The Second Option. "Thirty-three states can't be wrong."

Thirty-three of the forty-seven states with four year terms (70%) conduct their statewide elections in the even years between presidential elections. The main attraction of this option is the ability of the candidates and voters to concentrate on state issues and campaigns. Presidential and senatorial elections tend to drown out the gubernatorial competition when all three are held during the same year, as we saw here in 1984. State contests can be nationalized and state issues ignored. North Carolina's increasing party competitiveness should encourage both Republicans and Democrats to fight out state issues in the broad daylight of an even-year, off-presidential year election.

Larry Sabato also sees such off-presidential year elections as increasing governors chances in presidential races.

With politically more secure home bases, governors thus are becoming more attractive to their parties as potential presidential nominees. Senators continue to hold the tenure advantage, but the gap has been narrowed considerably by the extension of virtually all governors' terms from two to four years, the addition of succession term provisions for governors, and the shift of gubernatorial elections to non-presidential years -- all of which afford governors some of the same political benefits that U.S. senators derive from their term structure.<sup>5</sup>

While this argument may be persuasive, it seems unlikely that in an era of full-time presidential campaigning a sitting governor can mount a nationwide campaign effort and not provoke the wrath of voters back home. The last two presidents, Jimmy Carter and Ronald Reagan, did step from the governor's chair to the White House - but they had time between these two stops to do the necessary campaigning to win their party's nomination and then the general election. Two current presidential aspirants in the 1988 presidential campaign, former governors Bruce Babbitt [D] of Arizona and Pete duPont of Delaware are attempting to follow the same road.

The Third Option. Five states have opted for the odd-year, off-presidential year election for their statewide elections. The only other advantage besides those discussed above is the possibly increased field of gubernatorial aspirants.

Off-year gubernatorial elections also attract congressional candidates. Edwin Edwards, D.-La., his successor David Treen, R.-La., and William Cahill, R.-N.J., are three recent examples of House members who ran for (and won) governorships in off-year elections. Because they would have retained their seats even if they had lost, their candidacies were low-risk political ventures.<sup>6</sup>

However, that one consideration is far outweighed by the negatives of this third option. One is the high visibility accorded these few states' campaigns by the media and political observers. Trends and issues in these elections are often extrapolated as potential national issues and trends.

In effect, they can become nationalized as there is so little other political news to follow. A second we saw here in North Carolina when the General Assembly set a May 1986 constitutional amendment vote, strong opposition to the change quickly formed. The ill-fated amendment would have set up the election for the state legislature in 1989 (rather than 1988) and those elected in 1986 would have served an extended three-year term. Statewide elected officials would have served a five year term, and the next election would be in 1993 rather than 1992. The normal rhythm of our state political system would have been disrupted and no one could foresee who would win, if any, or lose due to the change.

As you well know Governor Martin opposed this proposed amendment and set up a committee to lead the campaign against the amendment. The Committee based its opposition on the increased costs of adding a new statewide election and the effects of continuous campaigning, in some cycles, of three years in a row.<sup>7</sup>

There was other opposition too. The Charlotte Observer called the amendment "a bad idea" and supported option two.<sup>8</sup> The Winston-Salem Journal decried the "sorry performance" of the legislature in placing the amendment on the ballot and called for its defeat.<sup>9</sup> The Raleigh News and Observer ran this editorial in opposition to the amendment:

When state legislators drafted a constitutional amendment that would shift state and county elections to odd numbered years, they botched the rescheduling. Voters ought to defeat the amendment.

Most states already have detached their own elections from presidential elections. Legislators make a strong argument that holding state and county elections on non-presidential election years would remove them from the shadow of national campaigns and direct attention to state politics and issues. Shifting state elections to even-numbered non-presidential elections years would have made sense.

But that is not what the General Assembly proposed. It selected odd numbered years. This would burden voters and political parties. As governor's race would begin just as a presidential election ended. Once campaigns for governor and other statewide offices closed, campaigns for U.S. senator and Congress would open. Under the amendment, therefore, there would be at least three straight years with major elections, straining party resources and detaching congressional slates from state slates.

The odd-year amendment has other drawbacks: 1) A proliferation of elections could result in voter fatigue and a drop in turnouts, which already are low. 2) Local elections could suffer from being in the shadow of statewide elections.<sup>10</sup>

This final point is perhaps the most important outcome of such a change: the potential overpowering impact of the state wide elections on local government elections. In effect, if the amendment were adopted to separate national and state elections and issues, it might have caused the same problem for the local governments and local politics by having state elections clouding local concerns and issues. The odd-year amendment lost, 58 percent voting "NO" and 42 percent "YES".

SUMMARY

The most attractive option is the second, the movement of statewide elections to the non-presidential (even) election year. The question then becomes timing. North Carolina could choose 1988 for election to a two-year term and then 1990 to full four-year term or a 1992 and 1994 combination. The political affiliation of the sitting governor has considerable influence on the choice, as does the sense of fair play.

The best approach to consider a change in the ground rules of state politics such as this is to separate the personalities involved from the reform sought. Therefore the preferred option would be to have the change begin with the 1992 elections, with the winners then serving a two year term. In 1994, the elections for regular four year terms would begin as would the succession clock for the governor and lieutenant governor.

By doing this, North Carolina would have completed the three step reform many have called for: a four year term for the governor; gubernatorial succession; and the separation of state and national elections.
